FRIDAY, SEPT. 4, 1857.

We have before us the "Report of the Clay Monument Association," published for the benefit of that association. It is for sale at all the bookstores in the city, and by all the news-boys. Besides an account of the "Ceremonies at the Laying of the Corner-stone of the National Monument" at Lexagten, on the Pourth of July last, it contains the ble oration delivered by Dr. R. J. Breckinridge on that occasion. We hope that all our readers will procure a copy. From a slight examination of Dr. Breckinridge's discourse, as published, the impression we formed on hearing it delivered, that it is the only oration worthy of its immortal subject, is confirmed. All Mr. Clay's great qualities are traced to their true source, and are dwelt upon lovingly and truthfully. Especially does the orator seem to sympathise with that "unspoilt faculty of scorn" which Mr. Clay possessed-the scorn of all meanness, of all littleness, of all trick and chicanery, of everything that was not lofty and high and generous and noble. We have not time to say more at present, but propose to do so in a few days. The proceeds of the sale are for the erection of the mon-

The band will be accompanied by the Field Marchais of the U.S. Agricultural Society.

Every spirit-tone from the soul-lyre of the oung poetess of New Castle is echoed from the depths of thousands of hearts:

[For the Louisville Balletin.] WHEN WE PARTED.

BY SALLIE M. DRYAN.

A dark-blue robe all gemmed with splendid stars Pell in still folds around the regal Night, And the pale crescent on her fair brow shone With a dim quivering luster—when we parted. Thy dreamy gaze oft-wandered to the skies, As it would read their mysteries to learn, If there earth's loving loved and met no ill. Ay, poetry was trembling on thy lip, d burning in thy bosom-when we parted-Oh 'twas so long ago !

Perchance not oft The violets have come and passed away,
And the young rose-buds raised their levely lips To kiss the Spring's bright beauty-ince we parted. Yet it was long ago! Eternities Since then have perished-yet we both breathe on And smile and weep and build dream-palaces And make us idols brightly beautiful And burn the richest incense of the heart On these new shrines, and bow and worship there With all the deep devotedness of yore— Though misty autumn days and mournful nights, All black with desolation, have gone by-Though we are parted.

Shall I behold thee, bright, once worshipped one! Look on this flower—thou knowest its emblem? Ay, "The apell is broken," mucmure from its leaves I Yet haunting memories all pale and shadowy Else in my bosom's dream-time from the past And hid my soul to rush and meet thine own, As in blest yore to wander with it through Those beautiful cloud-castles far away Beneath the splendid shadows falling deep From the rich gold and crimson drapery hung Around the halls where sunset-angels dream, Or float through night's blue sea of loneliness In stray barks. Oh say rememberest thou The tears of-when we parted?

THE MASONIC TEMPLE FAIR .- This evening erertainment has proven decidedly the most popular place of resort in the city during the week. It is nightly the center of attraction toward which fashion, beauty, and all the graces converge. In the magnificent Masonic Hall there is ample space and verge for the display of the most elaborate wardrobes, the finest chiseled features and forms, that would rival even the Venus de Medici in classic purity and chasteness.

We are not surprised at these tremendous concourses. The object of the fair is a most noble one. At large expense, the Masonic fraternity have erectel one of the most complete and beautiful buildings in the West. It is a monument, that will last through ages, of their devotion to philanthropic objects, and their great enterprise in beautifying the city. It is additionally commemorative of the noble and indestructible principles of their venerable order.

In passing through the mazes of beauty and loveliness, the glitter and brilliance adorning the room, we are mystified in our attempts to select articles or persons deserving special mention, all are so beautiful and so eminently worthy of our praise.

We have already mentioned the Encampment table and the accomplished lady presiding over it, assisted by her lovely and fascinating adjuncts. Immediately to the left is the Council table, over which preside Mrs. Hillman and Mrs. -have arranged their apartment with exquisite taste and present such an array of attractive articles that we are not surprised at the throngs who gather about and purchase liberally of their goods. The bill of fare at this table is superb; it could not be excelled at Taylor's, in New York.

The "Willis Stewart" Lodge is admirably repesented. A handsome portrait of that distinguished Mason hangs above the decoration. A number of tucky centaurs. interesting ladies preside here with native grace. Almost immediately opposite is the table of "Mt. Moriah" Lodge." It is especially tasteful in its substantials that one can but covet, and desiring, can but feel in the utmost depths of his pockets for the wherewith to purchase. This beautiful table is under the charge of Mrs. James Lupe and Mrs. George Briggs.

The ball room is thronged nightly, and is the source of much innocent pleasure to hundreds of ur young friends whose passion it is to trip it on the light fantastic toe

We are gratified to learn that the success of the fur has thus far more than equaled the expectations of the most sanguine. It is designed to keep the fair open during the next week, so that all will have an opportunity of visiting the beautiful temple. Additions to the attractions and means of enjoyment of the fair will be made each night.

RIVER AND STEAMBOAT MATTERS.

The river is rising again. Lest evening there were 4 feet 7 inches water in the canal. The rise is from the Kentucky river.

Reynolds, which leaves that port for New Orleans on Friday. Travelers cannot find better boats than the N. and V. We are indebted to Mr. Archer, her clerk, for late papers.

For St. Louis .- The fine and fast packet Alvin Adams, in command of Capt. Lamb, resumes her regular tripe in the St. Louis trade to-day.

THE U.S. AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY. Fifth Annual Fair.

FOURTH DAY'S PROCEEDINGS.

As had been hopefully predicted, yesterday was the most interesting day thus far of the week. The attendance was much the greatest of any day, and the arrival of numerous strangers of distinction added very considerably to the general interest.
The delightful weather that has thus far been youchsafed to us continues with undiminished brilliance. It is all that heart could desire-the days seeming to have been stolen from some balmy clime, where storms and heat come not, but over which shines a bright attempered sun, shorn of his beams, and sweet south winds laden with refreshing odors steal in all their hymned willfulness.

The spectacle presented upon the grounds yesterday was of the most exciting and enlivening character. From the amphitheatre came the shouts of the peorle and the clear, soft tones of music. In the Floral Hall all was gayety and bustle. About the Implement Hall and Agricultural Tent were to be heard those most propitious of all notes-the sounds of industry, of busy, stirring, active life. Universal satisfaction prevailed, and President Wilder's face last evening was wreathed with smiles. THE CATTLE DISPLAY.

This was not large, and consisted chiefly of Jersey cattle, another uncommon breed in this latitude but highly popular where best known. It is chiefly remarkable for the fine lacteal fluids it produces.

POULTRY. We have nothing remarkable to report concern ing our fowl friends, the chickens, turkeys, ducks, and geese. They were neither numerous, nor peculiarly noticable for size, although they may possess certain qualities not particularly recognizable by one who is unacquainted with the feathered biped

THE TROTTING MATCHES.

The excitement of the Derby and Epsom races could scarcely have eclipsed that which pervaded the vast throng looking upon the trotting races yesterday. About the Judge's stand there was a living, moving, enthusiastic crowd. Around the whole track were gathered hundreds of spectators. Watches were out of every man's pocket timing the speed of the horses, and whenever they passed there was cheer after cheer for the swift steeds and their bold drivers. We are unable to give but the result of one of the matches. The Judges, singularly enough, failed to make the proper report at the Sec-

We heard but one voice from the vast crowd that beautified and adorned the amphitheatre yesterday. It was an expression of universal and unalloyed sat isfaction at the brilliant display of horses. No wor. der that the ladies waved their handkerchiefs with lily-white hands and the gentlemen cheered with their stentorian voices as ring after ring of the finest horses were introduced for the inspection of the Judges. The task of these arbitrators must have been difficult indeed. Between such elegant and spirited specimens of the equine race it was indeed a matter requiring the utmost taste and horse ense to discriminate properly.

Every variety of the horse kind was shown. We had horses that paced and racked and went all manner of gaits. We had draft horses that could apparently have drawn the Egyptian pyramids from their eternal bases. We had specimens of driving that would have put to blush any of the charioteers who figured in the Olympian races; and there were vouths and men astride of noble horses who appeared to have been born in the saddle-perfect Ken-

The committee report J. D. Olcott, of Michigan, entitled to premiums for his bucks, three in number, viz.: 2 year old, 1 rear old, French merinos, and a Spanish buck 2 years old. The following gentlemen have reported themselves to the "press tent" since our last issue: James E. Worsham, Evening News, Memphis; B. F. Sandford, Ohio Valley Farmer, Cin.;

Wm. T. Dennis, Indiana Farmer, Richmond Howard Cox, Republican, Bloomington, Ind.; S. Davis, Journal, Covington, Ky.;

G. F. Cookerly, Journal, Terre Haute, Ind.; G. F. Gray, Evening Journal, Albany, N. Y.; Goo. E. Greene, Sun, Vincennes, Ind., A. S Mitchell, Intelligencer, St. Louis, Mo. A. Speer, Prank Leslie's Illustrated Newspap THE FLORAL HALL.

This beautiful building was again thronged to overflowing during the entire day. From whatever point of the interior a view is taken of its proportions the spectator is struck with wonder and delight Every arrangement is complete, and the display of fruits and flowers is exceeded in tastefulness only by the superb quality and deliciousness of these choice gifts of nature. The committees were still hard at work during the day, but promise a reper of their careful doings this morning.

THE IMPLEMENT TENT. It has been generally remarked that the West has never witnessed such an extensive and complete collection of agricultural implements as are to be seen in the mammoth tent. They embrace every class of article that the fertile and inventive genius of America can produce. The farmer can now contemplate no possible contingency in rearing his crops that is not provided for by these useful and labor-saving machines.

We are proud to see that the Kentucky Harvest er, manufactured by Miller, Wingate, & Co., is attracting special attention. It has won a large number of premiums, and has justly established itself in the confidence of agriculturists throughout the South and West.

Hay, Straw, and Fodder Cutter .- One of these machines attracted our notice. It is of a very useful class. A great variety of them have been manufactured for cutting feed for horses and cattle, but few have proven successful.

The Cummings patent, exhibited by George D. Griffin, of Harrisburg, Pa., strikes us as the best we ever saw. Its remarkable features are—first, that by which it cleanses the provender on which it operates, ere it reaches its revolving knives. This operation is done perfectly, and thus the knives are saved from being dulled and hacked by cutting grit, as in all other such machines. Next, the provender is passed, ere reaching the knives, between rollers, which invariably crush all stocks over half an inch in diameter. This great advantage is obtained in no other such machine. Others will cut up stocks, but do not render them fit to be eaten by cattle, which invariably refuse cut stocks if not crushed so as to render them convenient for being eaten and digested. Broadcast Seed Sower .- Mr. D. R. Haynes exhibits a simble machine for sowing grain, hemp, flax, &c.,

Corn and Cob Mill .- J. O. Joyce & Co., of Cincinuati, have on exhibition their famous Star Mill. It appears worthy of its reputation.

Shelling Corn .- After examining one of the machines of J. Vanhorn, of Putnam, Ill., we have come to the conclusion that the day of "corn shuckings" is over. Machinery effects now that which was fer merly performed by slow and tedious manipulation.

Illinois Harcester .- This is the patent of Mr. Haines, for the reaping of grain, designed, as it is, to reap and elevate the cut grain into a wagon bed at one and the same time, or discharge it in a swath to be taken up by barley forks after curing, or raked off in girth for binding, if necessary.

Corn Planter .- A combined corn planter and cornfield hoe is exhibited by Daniel B. Niel, of Mt. Gilead, Morrow co., Ohio.

An improvement on the same article is shown by D. W. Hughes, of Palmyra, Mo., warranted to plant as well in sod, or rough, rooty, and stony ground. But it would occupy all of our available space to even make a catalogue of these articles. We turn to the source of the busy hum and roar of ma-

THE VANDEACTURERS' HALL.

It is crowded to repletion, and there are still numerous arrivals from abroad. Entering at the east of the hall, we are pleased to notice a magnificent display of Louisville manufactures, from the foundery of Messrs. Wallace, Lithgow, & Co. Specimens (all very superior) of their work have been arranged with the accurate eye for display that their unior partner (J. Henry Thomas) possesses. A Three years and over.—ist premium to R. A. Captain Harig was present during the day, discoursing with untiring zeal upon the merits of his wonderful combination lock. It was chiefly wondered at. for so intricate is the invention that but few can comprehend its construction. The Captain, however, impressed every one with the utility of his invention.

We are gratified to know that the success of manafacturers from abroad has been very great. Most of them have made extensive sales.

We hear also of sales of Devon cattle and other herds brought from a distance and all at fair prices. DISTINGUISHED STRANGERS.

There was a large number of gentlemen of distinction on the grounds yesterday. Among them Vice President Breckinridge, Hon. Thos. M. Clay, Judge Duval, of the Appellate Court, Gen. Sidney Johnson, &c. The latter gentleman has been appointed to the command of the Utah expedition. He is a native of Madison county, in this State, and one of the most accomplished and brave officers in

Col. Cumming, who goes to Wah, failed as a merchant. We hope he may not fall as a General.

DR. GOLDSMITH .- We find in a Vermont paper the following account of a remarkable operation performed by that very skillful and eminent surgeon, Dr. Goldsmith, Professor of Surgery in the Kentucky School of Medicine:

A Successful Surgical Operation.—So as time since a boy in this vicinity fell from a tree with an open pendinfic in his hand. He struck in such a manner as to force the blade through his ear into his head. The blade broke off, leaving an inch and a quarter of its length buried out of sight in the substance of the head. The blade eventually passed into the brain. An application to several eminent surgeons in New York and elsewhere failed to bring relief. The case was at last brought to the attention of Dr. in New York and elsewhere tailed to oring rates. The case was at last brought to the attention of Dr. Middleton Goldsmith, of Costioton Medical College, who lately succeeded, by a delibate operation, in removing the blade. After the removal the brain could be distinctly felt at the bottom of the cavity. The hearing, which had been impaired, was entirely restored, and the boy is now as good as new.

To the Editors of the Louisville Journal: Louisville, Sept. 3, 1857.

Generalem: Popularity is forced upon some men from pure merit, whilst others, like drowning men, catch at straws, and are driven to she homesophatic arch and deep soundings to find a relationship research and deep soundings to find a "chatterisal" the billionth in magnitude to swell their previous greatness. Mr. J. G. Dodge should have been the last individual to have exclaimed, "Paul I know, and Christ I know, but who are you?" I am one who bear the same relationship to this great and good. who bear the same relationship to this great and good man, that he so strenuously claims—but whilst I would consider it a great honor, one rich in the ex-treme, still the shades of relationship are so far ob-literated, that the individual would have to be a very nice mathematician to be able to figure out such a genealogy as to enable one to even claim any relationship at all. Some men are born great—other have greatness forced upon them, and sometimes force it upon themselves. This sou disant relation seems to claim the whole batch of hotor for himself and leds, whilst he available others who reside with a lot of refrigerators, ice chests, water coolers, &c.
They are of the best quality.

Col. Buchanan, of the U. S. Army, has placed on exhibition two boats patented by himself. One is a life-boat, designed for security on the open sea, or in the surf upon a dangerous coast. The other is adapted to rivers, and is so light and portable that it will be eminently serviceable in all military operation.

Specimens of the iron pipe designed for the Louisville Water Works, made by Hutchings & Co., at the Locemative Works, are on exhibition. They are of 4, 8, 10, 12, 16, and 20 inches in diameter, and of Washington—making Mr. Deege s grand motates the same.

If this constitutes a relationship to be so eagerly sought after, then I do not enry the gentleman the honor—but it forcibly reminds one of the old Virginia negro who claimed "sita" with hissas Washington, who, when asked in what degree be sustained his relationship, said, that "his master's father's great uncle's dog ran through Washington's combield." The only near relation of Washington in this section of the country is a lady whom Washington named and stood as God Father for at her baptism.

In conclusion, the gentleman refers to my not being better posted—in answer to which I will just say, that if any person knows the gentleman's pedigree well, I do. As to honor, he should brever seal his lips when he applies dishener to others, for men who live in glass houses, should never throw stones.

I shall not condescend to notice any further this pseudo relation of the Washington family.

We have had mules of the tallest height (18 hands), and the glossiest skins, jet black, chestnut, and bay-all beautiful, and all, of all ages, (y)earlings, as our friend lesslick, of the Spirit of the Times, would say. The specimens of that patient tribe whereof Coleridge wrote a touching ditty, and upon which Don Quixote, Gil Blas, and those other knights rode and tilted at wind-mills, have been remarkably muscular and brawny.

The show this evening will be the greatest of the week, consisting entirely of bleoded horses.

The ponies enter in a grand cavalcade at noon. The awards for reaper and mowers at the trial in Syracuse in July last, have just been announced, and are as follows:

Reapers .- C. H. McCormick, of Chicago, Ills., gold medal; Walter A. Wood, of Hoosac Falls, N. Y., silver medal; Warder, Brokaw, & Child, Springfield, Ohio, bronze medal; Jonathan Haines, Pekin, Ills., diploma.

Reapers and Mowers, Combined Machines. - Walter A. Wood, Hoosac Palls, N. Y., gold medal; D. M. Osborne, Buffalo, N. Y., silver medal; Warder, Brokaw, & Child, Springfeld, Ohie, bronze medal.

The awards for mowing machines have not yet been made.

CONSUMPTION OF MEAT IN PARIS .- The Paris correspondent of the New York Journal of Comenerce states the annual consumption of meat in Paris at a hundred and sixty millions of pounds, it being double the amount consumed thirty years ago. He adds that the monopoly now enjoyed by the butchers is to be broken up and free trade substituted. Apprehensions are entertained for the consequences of the experiment, as, under the present system of licensed victuallers, knavery is sufficiently prevalent. It is stated that the police had just detected at Mont Martre an extensive entrepot of ekinned cats, which were fernished by contract to the eating-houses, and served up as rabbits, bares, and other common materials for ragouts.

How THEY SHOET MEN IN ARKANSAS .- Mr. A. M. Wilson, of Fayetteville, Arkansas, thus describes, in a letter to the Little Rock Democrat, how he was shot in his sleep :

Two of the bullets entered my right shoulder, one my left hand, and strange to say, I was so sound asleep that I did not hear the report of pistol or gun. I had three small sors in my room, but they did not hear the report. I supposed that in my sleep I had torn my hand against the bed-post. I waked up my sons, they lit a candle and I discovered that my right shoulder was covered with blood. I did not feel any nain at first, but my shoulder felt he. my right shoulder was covered with blood. I did not feel any pain at first, but my shoulder felt be-numbed, as if I had lain on it too long. I have had two of the suspected parties arrested and bound for court. They are the only persons I have had any difficulty with in the country. One of them had passed counterfeit money, and knew that I would prosecute him next court if I got sufficient testimony of his guilt. They picked the mortar out from be-tween the logs and had me. I was within two feet of the cun or vistol.

Man Shor—Probable Honacide.—A man named Slider was shot last night, on Shelby street, near Trezevant, by snother named James R. Pollock. The weapon used was a pistol and the ball entered the stomach. There was an unsettled difficulty beween the parties, the origin and progress of which have been related to us. It appears that they have both been psying court at the shrine of a young woman who resides on Poplar street, with whom Pollock had exchanged daguerrectypes and perhaps other tokens of reciprocal affection and confidence. lock had exchanged daguerrectypes and perhaps other tokens of reciprocal affection and confidence. But, as "the course of true love never does run smooth," a misunderstanding of some sort arese between them, upon which Pollock demanded the return of his pictured semblances. The lady compiled, though, at the time of giving him possession, she took occasion to express her opinion that he was "no part of a gentlershan." Pollock replied that he could not strike a woman, but if any male friend would take her part he would resent the insult. Slider, who was present, remarked that he would standier the lady. Pollock then drew upon him, but the interference of bystanders prevented a collision. The parties did not meet again until last night, when Pollock escorted a lady home from church who lived on Shelby street, Slider and a friend being in advance of them Just past the house where the hidy resided, Slider halted, and when the lady entered he called to Pollock that he wished to speak with him, advancing toward him at the time. Pollock told him to stand back, and he stooped, when P. fired upon him. After the shooting, Pollock entered the house and remained a few minutes, when he left and has not since been heard from. The wounded man is expected to die hourly, Pollock was in the employ of Dr. Y. A. Car, tearning the daguerrectyping business. He came from Washington county, Ark. Slider was a blackmith, in the employ of the Mississippi and Tennessee Tailroad Company. He was a German.

THE NATIONAL CAPITOL—Extension, Progress, and Beauty of the Work.—A large number of iron plinths, for the heavy columns of then ew dome, have lately arrived from the iron works of the contractors, and are being put up. The pilasters and columns will immediately follow on the setting of the plinths. The interior cornice of the new dome is being put up under the superintendence of Mr. Fowler, of the firm of Bebee & Co.

In the new House hall the click of the busy hammer and the usual industrial sounds attendant on the presecution of a vast work are constantly heard. The doors of the galleries of the hall are being made, and are of beautiful design and finish; they are veneered with bird's-eye maple, and further finished by exquisitely designed brass ornamental mouldings, representing national fruits, flowers &c.

Of these doors surrounding the galleries Of these doors surrounding the galleries of the two halls there are to be twenty-four, twelve of which are nearly done, and are being ornamented with variously designed mouldings and wreaths.—The mouldings are all being done in the brass foundery, attached to the premises, by the best artists. The floor of the new hall is being rapidly finished. The gallery fronts are all done except the painting. The Speaker's retiring room—which will be, when fisished, the most beautiful room in the whole building—is constructed entirely of iron. The pilasters ing—is constructed entirely of iron. The pilasters are now being set, and the bricklayers are backing up as fast as they are placed in position. The mechanical exactitude which is required in fitting together the various parts of the iron finishing is far beyond that of any other branch of the work. The ornamental sash lights in the ceiling of the new and commenced sight to inspire the admiration of the most indifferent observer. The beautiful designs in colored glass, representing in each light the arms of one of the States of the Union, are soon to be set, and will not fail to create astonishment and delight. All the rooms surrounding the hall of the House are being pushed forward toward completion with com-mendable dispatch. The painting, plastering, freecoing, and all the various branches of the interior work are in a state of advancement.

The stairways of either building are going up, and growing in interest and beauty as they advance.
They are to be of marble, either native or Italian, throughout. The stairway in the new Senate, when completed, will challenge the admiration of the world. Not a point from base to apex but what will be so nicely fitted together that it will seem as if hewn out of solid rock; and so highly polished as to serve for a mirror to reflect back the figure of the spectator.

The foundations of the portices and colonnades are nearly finished at both wings. The connecting corridors are going up with uninterrupted success. It is worthy of remark that the capitals and pilasters throughout will be ornamented with designs representative of American products, such as corn, to-

In the statuary department the work goes bravely on. The large piece nearly finished by Gaghardi, representing "America," is worth a visit; and, near by, in the same room, the "Indian Mother" is nearly completed by the same artist. In an adjoining room, the "Woodman," from a new design by Crawford, is just begun. This piece represents the piece American in the act of felling an enormous tree, while at its foot a poisonous gnake, with upneer American in the act of felling an enormous tree, while at its foot a poisonous snake, with upplifted head and fangs distended, watches with devilish hate the sturdy ferester who has disturbed its domicil. The woodman toils on, unaware of the lurking danger. The piece is life-size and designed with graphic skill, and is to be executed by Senor Batti, an Italian sculptor. "The Young Hunter" is the name of another new piece from the same designer, and just commenced by Senor Batti. The Victim of Politics.—Peter Brush, the victim of politics, seated upon the curb, with his feet across the gutter, placed his elbow on a stepping stone, and, like Juliet on the balcony, leaned his head upon his hand—a hand that would perhaps have been the better for a covering, though none would have been rash enough to volunteer to be a glove upon it. He was in a dilapidated condition; out at elbows, out at knees, out of pocket, out of office, out of spirits, and out in the street; an "out and outer" in every respect, and as outre a mortal as ever the eye of man did rest upon. For some time Mr. Brush's reflections had been silent. Following Hamlet's advice, "he gave them an understanding, but no tongue;" and he relieved himself at intervals by spitting forlorally into the kennel. At length, suffering his locked hands to fall between his knees, and heaving a deep sigh, he spoke:

"A long time ago, my ma used to put on her specks and say, "Peter, my son, put not your trust in princes;' and from that day to this I haven't done anything of the kind, because none on 'em ever wanted to horrow nothing of the say I haven't and he wanted to put I haven't done wanted to horrow nothing of the say I haven't and here wanted to put on her wanted to horrow nothing of the say I haven't done anything of the kind, because none on 'em ever wanted to horrow nothing of the say I haven't and I haven THE VICTIM OF POLITICS .- Peter Brush, specks and say, Teter, my sea, par not your data in princes; and from that day to this I haven't done anything of the kind, because none on 'em ever wanted to borrow nothing of me; and I never see a prince or a king—but one or two, and they had been rotated out of office—to borrow nothing of them. Princes! pooh! Put not your trust in politicianers—them's my sentiments. You might just as well try to hold an eel, for I've tried both, and I know. Put not your trust in politicianers, or you'll get a hyst.'

"Ten years ago it came into my head that things weren't going on right; so I pretty nearly gave myself up tee-totally to the good of the Republic, and left the ship to look out for itself. I was brimful of patriotism, and so uneasy in my mind for the salvation of freedom I couldn't work; I tried to guess which side was going to win, and I stuck to it like wax; sometimes I was a-oue side, sometimes I was a-'tother, and sometimes I straddled till the election was over, and came up jist in time to jine the hurwas over, and came up jist in time to jine the hurrah. It was good I was after; and what good could I do if I wasn't on the 'lected side? But, after all, it was never a bit of use.

"Whenever the battle was over, no matter what "Whenever the battle was over, no matter what side was sharing out the loaves and the fishes, and I stepped up, I'll be hanged if they didn't cram all they could into their own mouths, put their arms over some, and grab at the rest with their paws, and say: 'Go away, white man, you an't capable.' Capable! what's the reason I an't capable?—I've got as extensive a throat as any of 'em, and I could swallow the loaves and fishes without choking, if each loaf was as big as a grind-stone and each fish as big as a sturgeon. Give Peter a chance, and leave him alone for that. Then, another time when I called 'I want some spoils,' says I, 'a small bucketful of spoils. Whichever side gets in shares the spoils, don't they?' So they first grinned, and then they ups and tells me that virtue like mine was its own reward, and that spoils might spoil me. But it was no spoils that spoils me, and no loaf and fish that starved me. I'm spoilt because I couldn't get either.

that starved me. I'm spoilt because I couldn't get either.

"Put not your trust in politicianers; I say it sgain. Both sides used me jist alike. Here I we been serving my country, more or less, these ten years, like a patriot—going to town meetings, hurrahing my daylights out, and getting liked fifty times, and having more black eyes and bloody noses than you could shake a stick at, all for the common good, and for the purity of our legal rights; and all for what? Why for nix. If any good has come of it, the country has put it in her own pocket, and swindled me out of my arnings. I can't get no office! Republics is ungratefu! It wasn't reward I was after. I scorns the base in sinivation. I only wanted to be took care of, and have nothing to do but to take care of the public; and I've only got half—nothing to do took care of, and have nothing to do but to take care of the public; and I've only got half—nothing to do; Being took care of was the main shing. Republics is ungrateful! I'm blasted if they ain't. This is the way old soldiers are served! Welt, well; live and learn—live and learn! The world's not what a man takes it for before he finds it out. Whiskers grows sooner than what experience does. Genus and patriotism ain't got no chance."

Adventage of Foreign Travel.—An elderly lady who, with her daughter, has but recently returned from a very rapid journey through England, France, part of Germany, and Italy, was asked the other day if she had visited Rome, and she replied in the negative. "La! Ma, yes we did," said the daughter, "that was the place where we bought the bad stockings."

M. Florentine, in his last feutileton in the Moniteur, gives this description of an entertainment given in Paris by a rich New Yorker:

in Paris by a rich New Yorker:

A very rich and very intelligent American, Mr. James Dieck Hill, a charming man despite his millions, has determined to prove to the Parisians that they were wrong to complain of the heat, and to show them how it is braved and turned to good account. He gave a charming fete in his splendid vast drawing rooms, which are as airy as the Louvre. A large circular balcony, running around the rooms, allowed the guests to enjoy the air, without losing a note of the delicious music, which had attracted an enormous crowd on the Place de la Madeleine.—

The guests received at their entrance a hearty shake hands and a fam. He found means of assembling at this solvee, where an incredible degree of luxury was displayed, more artists, and great artists, than would be necessary to assure the fortune of twenty theatres. There were Mme. Borghimamo of the Opera, Mme. Frezzolinni, of the Italian Opera, Mmes Balestra, Laboccetts, Cimino, Didot. Ardavani, Bragi, Mmile. Corbari and two American ladies who will soon shine on the stage of the Italian Opera—Miss Hensler and Mrs. de Wilhorst.—Mme. Borghimamo delighted the company with a Neapolitan song and the famous brindist of Lucrezia Borgia. I say nothing of the success, nor of the voice of Mrs. de Wilhorst, nor of her talents; because, if she appears at one of our theatres, as we believe she is to do, we should not anticipate the interest of her debut. Mme. Frezzolini bade us adieu that evening; she was very beautiful and very sad; she cannot console herself on leaving Paris, although she goes to New York on a golden bridge longer than the submarine cable which will soon connect England and America. Oue of our friends asked her what she intended singing, but he repented his imprudence. "You are very curious," said she, drily, what she intended singing, but he repented his im-prudence. "You are very curious," said she, drily, "I will sing whatever I please." The truth is, she at the truth is, she intended to sing only one song, but, yielding to a sudden and irresistible inspiration, she sang, one after the other, the Miscrere of Trovatore and the quatuor of Rigoletto. She had really tears in her voice, and the drawing-rooms, the balcony, and the street shock with applause.

THE CHINESE AND THE RATS.—A letter from China to the London Times contains the following: 'I have already spoken of the fatness and fertility "I have already spoken of the fatness and fertility of the Hong Kong rats. When Minutius, the dictator, was swearing Flaminius in as his master of horse, we are told by Plutarch, that a rat chanced to squeak, and the superstitious people compelled both officers to resign their posts. Office would be held under great uncertainty in Hong Kong if a similar superstition prevailed. Sir John Bowring has just been swearing in Gen. Ashburnham as member of the Colonial Council, and, if the rats were silent, they shawed unusual modesty. They have silent, they showed unusual modesty. They have forced themselves, however, into a State paper. Two hundred rats are destroyed every night in the jail. Each morning the Chinese prisoners see with tearful eyes and watering mouths a pile of these delicacies cast out in waste. It is as if Christian respectively, were to see secret white sucking rice. prisoners were to see scores of white sucking pigs tossed forth to the dogs by Mahommedan jailers. At last they could refrain no longer. Daring the pun-ishment of tail-cutting, which follows any infraction of prison discipline, they first attempted to abstract the delicacies. Foiled in this, they took the more many course. They indicate a petition in good manly course. They indited a petition in good Chinese, proving from Confucius that it is sinful to cast away the food of man, and praying that the meat might be handed over to them to cook and eat. This is a fact, and if Gen. Thompson doubts it, I recommend him to move for a copy of the corres-

SUICIDE OF A PIGEON .- "A Bachelor," writing from Cooksville to the Macon (Miss.) Beacon, relates the following incident, which may be called beautiful, if true. He says:

I had a pair of beautiful pigeons presented to by a lady friend, which I reared as pets about the house to console my lonely hours. This evening the female, perceiving the end of a cat's tail vibrating from beneath a pair of steps, and prompted, I suppose, by a curiosity inseparable from her sex, flew down for a closer inspection of the inscrutable gyrations—when, alas! in an instant she fell a prey to the release fell caused by the relentless feline paws—another fall caused by female curiosity. The male, at first, scemed bewildered, then commenced uttering a low, plaintive noise, like the cocing of the dove; but in a few moments, as if becoming suddenly conscious of the inconsolable loss of his levely partner, flew into a pool of water near by, and, notwithstanding the strenuous efforts of myself and servant to the contrary, succeeded in effectually drowning himself.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., Aug. 25, 1857. Having been most unmercifully belabored by some writers for my note to you in June last, in regard to the growing cotton crop, I take the liberty of again calling your attention to the subject. To show that my object was not to knowingly over-estimate the crop, I send you a slip taken from one of our city papers. My opinion is shared by the editors of that paper, as well as by Mr. Peabody, one of the most practical men in the South, and one whose judgment is entitled to great consideration. I still persist in practical men in the south, and one whose judgment is entitled to great consideration. I still persist in saying that with a late frost, say 5th to 10th of November, the production will approximate 3,500,000. I have had ample opportunity for several weeks past of examining the crops in several counties, and it is my deliberate judgment that the prospect was never more premising.

Our opinion, be it observed, is predicated on that of planters and others. We find, among others, that Mr. Peabody, of the Soil and Planter, who was here last Saturday, agrees with us, that, with good weather and a late frost, the crop will be heavy. Within a day or two we have seen a few crops which bear us out in what we have said. The weed is large and well laden, and the weather is now very fine.

THE LOUISVILLE THEATER .- We have had no leisure during the week to visit the theater, but a friend has sent us the following communication. Mrs. Baker takes a benefit to-night:

Mrs. Baker takes a benefit to-night:

Mrs. Alexina Fisher Baker. The stage in our Atlantic cities has possessed no greater favorite than this lady. For the last fifteen years, and since her girlhood, she has occupied a most commanding position. The newspaper reputation that preceded her advent to Louisville had prepared us for the chaste and carefully studied personations which she has already given us, and we know not which to admire the most, the impassioned fervor and soul which she throws into her pathetic delineations, or the sparkling buoyaney of her comedy; but in every character she charms us by her strict fidelity to nature, and the absence of those conventionalities which have made the stage so often an exaggeration rather than a truthful reflex of life and human passions. With a voice of peculiar sweetness, and all the skillful modulation of elegant elecution, she wins her way at once to public favor, and mirrors to her auditors the beauty of the authors whose work she illustrates, with a skill which shows how nearly allied are the arts of poetry, painting, and the drama.

litistrates, with a sain which shows how hearly and lied are the arts of poetry, painting, and the drama.

As Mrs. Baker makes her first appeal to the generosity of the Louisville public in a benefit this evening, we feel confident that it will meet a hearty response, and that the theater will present an array of "hearts and hands" to crown her triumph in our carrilles. Thearts and hands" to crown her triumph in our city. Many families, we are aware, are much abstrated in the duties of private hospitality at this time, and but few of our citizens comparatively have witnessed her beautiful acting, but the house has been nightly crowded with visitors who have greeted her efforts with the most enthusiastic evidences of approval, and she has already established herself as a favorite among all classes.

We deem it our duty to say that Mr. Baker, the lessee, and Col. Wallace, the manager, have most promptly seconded the efforts of our citizens to entertain and bestow hospitality upon the many strangers now visiting us, and have courteously extend-gers now visiting us, and have courteously extend-ed the freedom of the theater to all our brother guests of the press, and to the officers, judges, &c., of the United States Agricultural Fair. When the bustle and excitement of the great exhibition are over the efforts of these gentlemen will be remem-bered, and we can answer for Louisville that they will be cordially appreciated. In the mean time, let the attendance on the benefit of the lady of the lessee this evening be made the occasion for paying off one instalment of our obligation.

THE WASHINGTON FAMILY.

To the Editors of the Lousville Journal:

Several articles having appeared in your paper in relation to "The Washington Family," I desire to speak. I was well acquainted from my infancy with the late Gen. Alexander L. Spotswood and Mrs. Spotswood, late of Barren county, Ky. Gen. Spotswood, a Colonial Governor of Virginia, and, I believe, a colonial Governor of Virginia, and, I believe, as ephew of the mother of "the Father of his country." Mrs. Spotswood, the wife of Gen. A. E. Spotswood, was a Miss Lewis, a niece of Gen. Washington. Gen. and Mrs. Spotswood left several children. Mrs. Adaline Anderson, of this city, is one of them, and a grand niece of Gen. Washington. Mrs. Dodge, wife of J. G. Dodge, is a child of hers. Mr. Dodge is a child of another daughter, who married the Rev. Mr. Dodge.

I would further add that Mr. Anderson has several other very worthy children, among whom is

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.

Washington, Sept. 3.

The following contains the most important features of President Buchanan's reply to the memorial of Professor Silliman and forty-two others of Connecticut on the affairs of Kansas. He commences by stating that from the distinguished source whence it proceeds, as well as its peculiar character, he has deemed it proper to depart from his general rule in such cases and to give it an answer. He then argues: You first assert that the fundamental principle of the Constitution of the United States and of our political institutions is that the people shall make their own laws and elect their own rulers.

You then express grief and astonishment that I their own laws and elect their own rulers.

You then express grief and astonishment that I should have violated this principle, and through Gov. Walker have employed the army, one of the purposes of which is to force the people of Kansas not to obey their own laws nor those of the United States, but laws which, it is notorious and established upon evidence, they never made and rulers they never elected; and, as a carollary from the foregoing, you represent that I am openly held up and proclaimed, to the great derogation of our national character, as violating, in its most essential particular, the solemn oath which the President has taken to support the constitution of this Union.

These are heavy charges, proceeding from gentlemen of your high character, and if well founded.

These are heavy charges, proceeding from gentle-men of your high character, and if well founded ought to consign my name to infamy; but, in proought to consign my name to infamy; but, in proportion to their gravity, common justsce, to say nothing of christian charity, requires that before making them you should have clearly ascertained that they were well founded. If not, they will rebound with withering condemnation upon their author. Have you performed this preliminary towards the man, who, however unworthy, is the chief magistrate of your country? If so, either you or I am laboring under a strange delusion.

Should this prove to be your case, it will present a memorable example of the truth that political prejudice is blind even to the existence of the plainest and most palpable historical facts. To these facts let us refer. When I entered upon the duties of the Presidential office on the 4th of March last, what was the condition of Kansas? That territory had been organized, and its government in all its

of the Presidential office on the 4th of March last, what was the condition of Kansas? That territory had been organized, and its government in all its branches was in full operation. A Governor, Secretary of the Territory, Chief Justice, two associate Justices, Marshal, and District Attorney had been appointed by my predecessor, and were all engaged in discharging their respective duties; a code of laws had been enacted by the Territorial Legislature, and the judiciary were employed in expounding and carrying these laws into effect.

In referring to the controversy that had previously arisen respecting the election of members to the Territorial Legislature, he says: In fact, I found the government of Kansas as well established as that of any other Territory. Under these circumstances, what was my duty? Was it to sustain this government, to protect it from the violence of law-less men who were determined to rule or ruin, to prevent it being overturned by force, in the lamguage of the Constitution, to take care that the laws be faithfully executed? It was for this purpose and this alone that I ordered a military force to Kansas as a posse comitatus, aiding the civil magistrates to carry the laws into execution.

The condition of the Territory at the time, which I need not portray, rendered this precaution actually necessary. In this state of affairs, would I not have been justly condemned had I left the marshall and other officers of like character impotent to execute the processes and judgments of the court of justice, established by Congress or the Territorial thus cute the processes and judgments of the court of justice, established by Congress or the Territorial Legislature under its express authority, and thus have suffered the government itself to become an object of contempt in the eyes of the people; and and yet this is what you designate as forcing the people of Kansas to obey laws not their own nor of the United States, and for doing which you have denounced me as having violated my oath.

I ask what else could I have done or ought I to have done? Would you have decided that I should abandon the territorial government, sentioned as it.

abandon the territorial government, sanctioned as it has been by Congress, to illegal violence, and thus of civil war and bloodshed which patriot had deplored.

This would indeed have been to violate my oath of office, and to fix a damning blot upon the character of my administration. I most cheerfully administration are the character of my administration. I most cheerfully admit that the necessity for sending a military force to Kansas to aid in executing the civil law, reflects no credit upon the character of our country, but let the blame fall upon the heads of the guilty. Whence did the necessity arise? A portion of the people of Kansas, unwilling to trust to the ballot box, the certain American remedy for redress of all grievances, undertook to create an independent government for themselves. Had this attempt proved successful, it would of course subverted the existing government prescribed and recognized by Congresa, and substituted a revolutionary government in its stead.

The President then enters into a more particular specification of the condition of affairs requiring the presence of a military force, which he has embraced above in general terms, and continues: The convention will soon assemble to perform the solemn duty of framing a constitution for themselves and their poeterity, and in the state of incipient rebellion which still exists in Kansas, it is my imperative duty to employ the troops of the United States (should this become necessary), in defending the convention against violence while framing a constitution, and in protecting the bons fide inhabitants (qualified to vote under the provisions of this instrument), in the free exercise of the right of suffrage when it shall be submitted to them for their approbation or rejection. The President then enters into a more particular approbation or rejection.

I have entire confidence in Governor Walker, that I have entire confidence in Governor Walker, that the troops will not be employed except to reast actual aggression, or in the execution of the laws, and this not until the powers of a civil magistrate shall prove available, following the wise example of Mr. Madison toward the Hartford convention.

An illegal and dangerous combination such as that of the Topeka convention, will not be disturbed unless they shall attempt to perform some act which will bring them into actual collision with the constitution and laws. In that event they shall be resisted and put down by the whole power of the Government. In verforming this duty I have the approbation of my own conscience, and I humbly trust of my God.

my God. I thank you for the assurance that you will not refrain from the prayer that Almighty God will make my administration an example of justice and subject of slavery, weich has been productive of much evil, and no good, and which if it succeed in attaining its object would ruin the slave as well as the master, this would be genuine philanthopy.

Every day of my life I feel how inadequate I am to perform the duties of my high station without continuing it in support of Divine Providence, yet placing my trust in Him, and Him alone, I entertain a good hope that he will enable me to do equal justice to all portions of the Union, and thus render me an humble instrument in restoring peace and harmony among the people of the several states.

Yours very respectfully,

JAMES BUCHANAN.

His effort to recover his status seems to be impeded by a doubt which the suthorities entertain on the question whether he can throw off his allegiance to the United States, and, if so, in what manner it can be done. The First Trip.—A party of our citizens crossed over yesterday, and took a first trip on the Memphis and Little Rock Railroad, some five miles out to the end of the track-laying. Our confrere, the senior editor of the Appeal, was among the number, and from him we learn that the examination of the work so far as it has progressed was highly satisfactory. The superstructure is well laid down, and the running of the locomotive upon it smooth and regular. There are now fourteen miles of iron on the ground, and enough more purchased to lay the ground, and enough more purchased to lay down the road to the St. Francis. The N. Y. Journal of Commerce, of Tuesday evening,

The N. Y. Journal of Commerce, of Tuesday ovening, says:

The Mechanics' Banking Association of this city, an institution with a reputed capital of $882,000, whose customers chiefly among mechanics, builders, and small traders, several days age found themselves expanded beyond prudent limits, and were obliged to call upon the larger city banks to rediscount a portion of their bills receivable. On Satusday they were again short, and, as noticed by us this morning, the banks again responded to their cal. This brought the institution under the notice of the thearing house Committee, who lastnight met at the bank to make an examination of its affairs. The examination was less satisfactory than hoped for, and a decireory of $78,000 was discovered in the cash. This decicioney was traced, it is said, to the paying teller, and a warrant was obtained for his arrest. The Committee at once suspended the institution from the privilege of exchanging at the Clearing House, and notified all the banks to that effect. In consequence of this the bank stopped payment this morning. House, and notified all the banks to that effect, in consequence of this the bank stopped payment this morning. The circulation (about $270,009) is abundantly secured by New York State Stocks, and the notes will be received by the city banks as usoal. The deposits will probably be paid in full, as it can hardly be that the capital is entirely consumed, although the bills receivable will be loss available than those held by most of the other banks, as many of the customers are needy borrowers who will find it difficult to obtain accommodations elsewhere until the market becomes much easier. In addition to the dediciency in the accounts of the Teller as stated above, we understand that a loan of $50,000 made by the Cashier is among the suspended do its. The deficiency is therefore $125,000. The Teller holds securities we understand for the $78,000, which, it is reported, he has merely loaned on his own account, but these are not immediately available.

Th

In relation to the failure of Hatch & Langdon, of Cin innati, the Gazette saye:

cinnati, the Gazette says:

The report of the suspension of Bebee & Co., of New York, prepared those who keep the run of Bank matters, for the suspension of the Central Bank, which took place this morning. Their belance, we understand, is from $100,000 to $110,000.

We are reliably informed, that independent of the funds in the hands of Bebee & Co., the firm has abundant means to dischryse its liabilities in full; and we also learn that a telegraph despatch was received to-day from the New York house, offering to place in the hands of Hatch & Langdon, Little Mami first mortsace bonds at fifty cents on the dollar as security. This offer has been accepted, and Mr. Hatch is on his way to New York to consumate the arrangement. This will probably enable the Contral Bank to resume business at an early day.

County funds were deposited in the Central Bank to the amount of $100,000. It also has a number of heavy depositor smong the 'up iswn' merchants, and its creditors, who hayesmall amounts on deposite, are quite numerous. The latter are chiefly Germans.
